

Pathways for children

Caring for Today, Teaching for Tomorrow

Senator Bruce Tarr (above right) and Representative Ann Margaret Ferrante (left) visited Pathways for Children on Friday, March 25th. During their ninety-minute stay they discussed a wide-range of public policy issues with Sue Todd, Pathways' CEO (middle) and Caroline Haines, its COO. Sue and Caroline both expressed their deep appreciation to both legislators for their responsiveness, consistent representation on behalf of their constituents and willingness to take a stand for those who are unable to advocate for themselves.

Sue noted that whenever Pathways' or The Children's League of MA (a statewide association of CEO's of Child Welfare organizations, and Public Agency Commissioner's on which she sits) requests the presence of state legislators, Senator Tarr and Representative Ferrante always answer the call personally. Their consistent presence and interest in the well-being of our organization and our families is exemplary. On behalf of the 400 children that attend Pathways programs every day, we salute Representative Ferrante and Senator Tarr for their steadfast support.
